EXPERIENCE HISTORIC FORTS AND BATTLEFIELDS

FROM FORT MALDEN TO THE NIAGARA REGION

The route from the City of Windsor eastbound to the Niagara region is a continuous historic corridor of defence commemorating fortifications used during the War of 1812, as well as battlefields where significant conflicts occurred.

Find more day trips, weekend getaway ideas and week-long itineraries at

IF YOU'RE A DAY TRIPPER .....

Your day adventure focuses on Fort Malden National Historic Site near Amherstburg, 28 km south of Windsor. The site commemorates both

Fort Amherstburg and Fort Malden, which formed the British stronghold on the Detroit frontier during the War of 1812 and the Upper Canada

Rebellions. Take part in the fort's signature interpretive experience, the explosive might of a 19th-century Brown Bess musket.

IF YOU'RE AN OVERNIGHTER .....

DAY 1: Visit Fort Malden National Historic Site, then take in the engaging exhibits at the nearby Park House Museum. Just 1.5 km from Fort Malden, the Amherstburg Freedom Museum preserves and presents stories and artifacts of African-Canadians, many of whose ancestors fled U.S. slavery. Travel 98 km to Chatham-Kent and the site of The Battle of Moraviantown, a decisive American victory which resulted in the death of Tecumseh, an iconic war hero. Here, the Tecumseh Parkway follows the Thames River, tracing the battle sites that are marked with signage guiding you to 11 interpretive stops.

DAY 2: Travel 26 km east to Thamesville, where Tecumseh Monument Park pays homage to its namesake with a statue, and is an ideal place to picnic. In just 8 km, visit the Fairfield on the Thames National Historic Site, a community destroyed by American forces following the Battle of Moraviantown. Next, travel 83 km east to the Southwold Earthworks, near St. Thomas, where from 1500 to 1650, a village of as many as 24 longhouses was home to 800 to 900 Attiwandaron (Neutral Iroquois). Oral tradition within the local Oneida First Nation recounts that Southwold, enclosed by a palisade, was used as a seasonal ceremonial site for healing and purification.

IF YOU'RE A WEEKENDER .....

DAY 1: Day one begins at Fort Malden, and includes visits to the Park House Museum and the Amherstburg Freedom Museum. Head to Chatham-Kent to visit the Battle of the Moraviantown and the Tecumseh Parkway.

DAY 2: Your second day is dedicated to visiting the Tecumseh Monument Park, the Fairfield on the Thames National Historic Site, and the Southwold Earthworks. Drive 235 km east to the fortifications and battlefield sites located in the Niagara region.

DAY 3: Start your day at Fort Mississauga National Historic Site, the only remaining military complex in Canada designed with a square tower within a star-shaped earthwork. Built between 1814-1816 to replace nearby Fort George as the counterpoise to the American Fort Niagara, it had various uses until the 1860s.

Just 2 km away, the War of 1812 comes to life at Fort George National Historic Site, with its restored powder magazine and other reconstructed buildings, military music of the 41st Fife and Drum Corps, musket demonstrations and 'British soldiers' talking about their families, and of May 27, 1813, the fateful day the fort fell to American forces.

Conclude at the Queenston Heights National Historic Site, commemorated by an extensive park on the Niagara escarpment (11 km from Fort George), the centrepiece of which is a 58-metre classical column containing the graves of Major General Sir Isaac Brock and Lt. Col. John Macdonell, Brock's Provincial Aide-de-Camp. Near Brock's Monument is the Landscape of Nations, a monument commemorating Indigenous contributions to the War of 1812.

CONSERVING FOR THE FUTURE

THE CHALLENGE

How can we improve ecosystem health?

Climate change, urban sprawl and development, and other human-caused impacts degrade natural habitats. Restoration work is one way to maintain healthy ecosystems and restore rare habitats. Restoration also helps to better connect ecological landscapes across protected areas in Ontario.

A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

Parks Canada is working with Indigenous partners, communities, schools, and volunteers on restoration research, invasive species removal, and native species planting. Between 2017 and 2022, over 145,000 native shrubs and trees and almost 18,000 native grasses and wildflowers were planted.

THE RESULT

Resource conservation work has led to the restoration of more than 40 hectares or 98.8 acres (that's 56 soccer fields) of coastal sand dunes, meadows and savannah habitats in Ontario's national parks.

GET INVOLVED NOW IT'S YOUR TURN

VOLUNTEER WITH THE TURTLE TRACKERS

Staff, scientists, partners and volunteers have installed eco-passages, protected and restored habitat, and even released turtle hatchlings to help increase turtle populations. Join the team effort and get firsthand experience monitoring turtle nests and collecting data.

Bruce Peninsula National Park

TEAM UP AND CLEAN UP THE SHORE

Make a difference in shoreline clean up! Pick up a cleanup kit and collect plastic waste and litter. Recording what you find will help Parks Canada identify and control sources of litter.

Lake Superior National Marine Conservation Area and Point Pelee National Park

RECORD YOUR HERPTILE OBSERVATIONS

Learn how to safely move turtles off the road as well as how to build and install a turtle nest box. Report your herptile sightings to the Herps of Ontario project section on the iNaturalist app and help raise awareness of these species at risk.

CAPTURING THE ESSENCE OF A VICTORIAN HOME

As an amateur photographer, I fell in love with the restored childhood home of Dr. Bethune; the curves of walnut and mahogany furniture, elaborate dinnerware, and intricately patterned rugs, fabric and wallpaper. I enjoy challenging myself to create scenes, work with different costumed heritage guides and experiment with the lighting in the historic house at Bethune Memorial House National Historic Site.

HIKING INTO THE PAST

The Dossyonsing Trail at Georgian Bay Islands National Park combines my favorite things about Beausoleil Island National Historic Site, from the smell of pine covered forest floors, the rocky outcrops of the Canadian Shield and the mossy blanket that inspired its Ojibwe name. Hiking the trail allows me to reset, reminding me of my childhood, learning and falling in love with the natural wonders and the history of the park.

MY ÔASIS

I love drifting off to sleep nestled snugly inside my own little Ôasis on the Trent-Severn Waterway National Historic Site. Every now and then a shooting star passes by the windows above and I think: this might be the best campsite in all of Ontario. A gentle morning paddle followed by an afternoon picnic watching the boats lock through makes the perfect weekend on the water.
